FLYING FEVER

Just a couple of weeks ago our friend Farmer Al Falfa and his cat Horatio were disturbed in the midst of an exciting game of Mah Jong by the official announcement of the "Around the world flying contest".

The farmer as well as many others were greatly attracted by the offered prize of 10,000 "bucks". The Dog College rowing squad rigged up an aeroplane that could be run by oars and were dipping quite heavily into the air. The farmers prize Bovine, the leading sheik of the local pastures becomes greatly excited over the event and by the aid of a board on his horns he soars smoothly thru the air. Leaping over the moon and everything. Farmer Al starts out on a lawn mower with wings on his arms. Then he tries riding a fast mule with an umbrella, but that soon ends in a flop. He spies a vacant aeroplane and drives it away. Once up in the open air, a gang of rowdy birds come and light on his plane, causing it to fall. Al wakes up in the end and says "Never Again". To this AESOP said, "Keep Your Feet On The Ground"
